Coronavirus COVID-19

A virus is a micro-organism, too small to be seen without a microscope that causes infectious disease in animals and humans.

In December 2019 a new disease was identified in China. On investigation, the disease was caused by a new virus of the coronavirus family, and has since been officially named COVID-19.

It is believed that COVID-19 was originated in a meat and live-animal market in the city of Wuhan in the province of Hubei in the country of China. It subsequently spread to other countries and was officially pronounced a pandemic by the World Health Organization (WHO) on 11 March 2020.

It also advised people to wash their hands more than usual and avoid travelling to affected areas.

Common signs of infection include fever, cough, shortness of breath, and breathing difficulties.
