13th July 1985  an important day in the history of pop music.

It  the date of Live Aid – the first global music event for charity.

There  four big concerts in different cities around the world – London, Philadelphia, Moscow, and Sydney.

The concerts were on television in 160 countries and there  millions of television viewers. The Live Aid concerts were to help people in Africa. In 1985

there  a famine in Ethiopia and thousands of people hungry. The organizers, two British singers,  friends with a lot of famous pop stars. U2, Queen, Elton John, Madonna, and Bob Dylan were all at the concerts.

Live Aid was a big success and there  millions of donations for Africa – with a total of about £40 million!

Big charity music events are now common all over the world. On May 17th 2008, Latin American singers, including Shakira, Ricky Martin, and Alejandro Sanz were at two simultaneous concerts in Buenos Aires and Mexico City. The concerts  to help poor children in Latin America and were part of a project called ALAS (Latin America in Solidarity Action). The reaction to the concerts  incredible, and there were donations of more than $200 million!

Types of Music

There are many different types of music. This menu is about the types of music I write about most often. Click on the links below to find out something about each one. By the way, you will need to know what a composer is before you start. If you don't know this, or would like to know a little more about composers, then look at the Composers page first.
